Calls For U.S. Support Toward Creation Of Independent Democracy Of Palestine

Former U.S. Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin denied that his recent report to President Truman on Palestine had threatened to bring about alleged "disintegration" of the Political Action Committee for Palestine, of which he is administrative chairman.

When the report was made public, calling for an immediate Anglo-American conference for the creation of an independent democracy of Palestine and suggesting that the new state be temporarily stripped of the mandated area of Trans-Jordan, criticism of the findings came from Rabbi Baruch Korff, founder and co-chairman of the committee.

Mr. Baldwin asserted that Rabbi Korff's criticism was welcomed, and was regarded by him as a sign of strength rather than of weakness within the committee, and certainly was not a sign of disintegration of the committee which is growing rapidly.

Mr. Baldwin referred to a paragraph at the end of a dispatch sent to the New York Herald Tribune from Jerusalem by Homer Bigart, published January 20. This quoted "Davar," the Jerusalem organ of the Jewish Labor Federation as saying that Mr. Baldwin was "undoubtedly an honest man, who has become entangled to his disadvantage," and that the committee he represented "already is disintegrating" because of disagreements over the report he presented. Rabbi Korff's disagreement was based on his statement that the report compromised certain inalienable rights of Jews in and [illegible] of Palestine, and criticized [illegible] for severance [illegible]

[illegible] said:

"I read with amazement the 'Davar' extract in the Herald Tribune of January 20 that the Political Action Committee for Palestine is already disintegrating because of its disagreement over my report as presented to President Truman.

"The committee in the last two months has increased its membership from 7,000 to about 37,000, and the committee's Congressional advisory board from eleven to sixty-four, partly as a result of the impartial attitude of our organization regarding my right to report my findings as I saw fit.

"Rabbi Baruch Korff, founder and co-chairman of the committee, was particularly helpful in this regard, and in reserving the right to criticize, strengthened rather than weakened my freedom of action for which I am grateful. That 'Davar' should presume to criticize Korff even by implication under the circumstances is a shock to me personally.

"Rabbi Korff's record in this fight has been a signal one . . .

"I can give assurance that as an organization, the committee, including Rabbi Korff, will indorse my report as a whole, whatever differences of opinion as to sections of it may be expressed by individual members."

In an official report to President Truman on conditions in the seething Holy Land, he placed primary responsibility for a solution of the Jewish-Arab problem on the United States.

Mr. Baldwin's 12,000-word account of his recent inspection trip to Palestine drew criticism from the founder of the Political Action Committee for Palestine,

Poland Seeks To Aid Jews There

The present government in Poland is making every effort to resettle and rehabilitate its Jewish population, Dr. Oscar Lange, Polish delegate to the United Nations Security Council, said in New York in an address at a dinner meeting held by the American Federation for Polish Jews, in a drive for $3,000,000 for emergency relief of Jews in Poland, at the Hotel Astor.

Dr. Lange, the principal speaker, described the difficulties in resettlement in areas and communities where Jews suffered intensely during the Nazi occupation. In these, he said, the government is granting complete freedom to Jews who wish to emigrate. He maintained, however, that the government is encouraging all those who want to and can achieve success to remain in Poland.

Meantime, the Polish government is strongly combating anti-Semitism through the country, Dr. Lange said. He declared the situation has been difficult, but was improving. He said the present attitude of the government is far different from that of any previous administration.

Other speakers were Vincent R. Impellitteri, president of the New York City Council; Dr. Howard M. LeSourd, dean of Boston University and chairman of the Christian Committee for Palestine; Dr. Frank Kingdon, radio commentator, and Leon Crestohl, president of the Canadian Federation of Polish Jews. Dr. LeSourd read an address by Dr. Joseph Tenenbaum, president of the American Federation for Polish Jews, who could not attend because of illness.

Pledges totaling $200,000 toward the relief fund were announced at the dinner.

Zionists To Spend $1,000,000 To Acquaint Public

The 1,600 delegates to the National Mobilization Conference of the Zionist Organization of America, in Chicago, Ill., agreeing that the immediate future may prove "the crucial and decisive stage in the history of our people," voted to raise a special $1,000,000 educational fund.

The fund, which is expected to be contributed by the 225,000 direct members of the Z.O.A. and the 250,000 members of affiliated organizations, will be spent to familiarize the American public with the aims and achievements of the Zionist movement.

A result of the Basel conference, according to Mortimer May, vice-president of the Z. O. A., was the emergence of the American delegation as a power in the Zionist movement throughout the world.

"We are going to have to realize now," he said, "that for the first time leadership in world Jewry and world Zionism has passed to the United States. This marks one of the fundamental changes in all of Jewish history, and only on one or two occasions in our long past has any such drastic occurrence been witnessed."

Captain William Kapelman, member of the national Z. O. A. executive committee and co-director of its veterans' bureau, called upon Secretary of State George C. Marshall to facilitate Jewish immigration into Palestine and the establishment there of a Jewish State.

Albert D. Schanzer, co-chairman of the veterans committee, who presided at the session, asserted that the British government had made Palestine "a virtual armed camp."

"Since when does a band of less than 1,000,000 need more than 125,000 troops to keep the peace?" he asked. "Is it not the pressure of Egypt and the fear of the shadow of the Russian Bear that is the secret reason for this increasing concentration of military forces?"

Father And Sons Win Scholarships

One scholarship winner in a family is sufficient for most people, but for the family of Louis Swerdlove, of 1920 Hone Avenue, the Bronx, the cup is running over. Mr. Swerdlove and two of his three children, Robert and Charles, won New York State war service scholarships in the competitive examinations.

Mr. Swerdlove, a 50-year-old engineer for the New York City Board of Water Supply, is a veteran of World War I who found the prospect of competing with his sons stimulating. All three took the examination in the same room amid a good deal of joshing.

"I know it's a little unusual," he declared, "but it was a lot of fun. Mrs. Swerdlove, rooting for me, was tickled that I beat them."

Robert, 24, said both he and his brother, 21, took the examinations "just for the heck of it." Unlike Mr. Swerdlove, neither of his sons plans to use the scholarship, which covers tuition and fees up to $350 a year for four years in any college, university, professional or technical school in the State selected by the winner and approved by the New York Board of Regents.

Robert explained that he and Charles are now receiving benefits from the GI Bill of Rights sufficient to meet their educational needs and that acceptance of the scholarship would mean forfeiting their other benefits.

Mr. Swerdlove, however, is tentatively planning to take education courses at Columbia University to prepare himself for a teaching post in a technical school upon retirement from the city's service. Born in New York City, Mr. Swerdlove was graduated from Cornell University as a civil engineer in 1917. He enlisted in the Army, went to Officers Training School and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the field artillery shortly before the 1918 armistice.

Prior to joining the New York City Board of Water Supply in 1927, Mr. Swerdlove worked on the installation of the Seventh Avenue subway line, with the river and harbor division of the Federal Government, on the Holland Tunnel, in the radio business and building field.

Robert, a student at the New York University School of Commerce, was drafted in February, 1943. He took his basic training at Camp Roberts, Calif., attended Fordham University in the Army's specialized training program, and went overseas with the Seventy-

Says U.S. Zionists To Spend Million For "Illegal" Palestine Entrants

United States Zionists are ready to pour "millions" of dollars into the financing of "illegal" immigration of Jews to Palestine, Dr. Emanuel Neumann, vice president of the Zionist Organization of America, said in London.

Dr. Neumann, who is also American member of the Executive of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, said at a press conference that American Jews hoped that Britain would regard the immigration activities, "not as wilfull rebellion, but as a great work of mercy and rescue."

Fadil Jamali, Iraqi Foreign Minister and president of the Council of the Arab League, a key figure said emphatically that the Arabs would not consider any solution involving any form of partition of Palestine. Dr. Fausi Mulki of the Trans-Jordan delegation endorsed Dr. Jamali's assertion.

Dr. Neumann deplored the activities of the terrorists in Palestine but made it clear that a distinction must be drawn between the financing of immigration and encouragement of the terrorists.

At its annual meeting the Anglo-Jewish Association adopted resolutions condemning the "wicked and senseless outrages which have occurred in Palestine" and the failure of the Zionists to agree to attend the Palestine conference.

Gershon Hirsch, spokesman for the Jewish Agency, indicated in Jerusalem that an anti-terrorism resolution approved by Vaad Leumi, the National Council of Palestine Jewry, would not cover attacks against British troops.

It was generally understood that the council would try merely to suppress "terrorism by Jews against Jews—enforced levying of funds, intimidation of individuals, kidnappings or coercion of any kind."

Palestine Jews, from school teachers to taxicab drivers, were called on to use force if necessary to resist the "Chicago methods" of terrorist groups in the "order of the day" adopted by the Jewish National Council, supreme body of Palestine Jews.

Jewish school teachers throughout the country would be called on to resist all attempts by Irgun Zvai Leumi gunmen to coerce young people into assisting in terrorist activities, the council suggested. Jewish taxi drivers, whose vehicles are frequently hijacked for terrorist operations, will be asked to oppose such thefts by force.

DP Passports Mean New Life

The British have started putting into use the new international identity documents that are to serve displaced persons in place of passports.

These are the equivalent of the pre-war Nansen passports and will be recognized as valid by all those countries belonging to the Inter-Governmental Committee on Refugees that have pledged themselves to honor them.

The Soviet Union and the eastern European nations that have fought so hard to get their repatriates back and that have accused the western powers of holding war criminals and Nazis, refused to join this convention. However, the documents will literally mean new life to hundreds of thousands of refugees throughout Europe and they represent a great step forward in the settlement of these persons.

Thus far, it is understood, the identity documents are being issued only within the United Kingdom. However, they have been printed in great numbers and will soon be issued in Germany, Austria, Italy and elsewhere. It is a solid and expensive job of printing that makes these documents look very much like British passports.

They all have returnability clauses. That means that the bearer has a right to return to the country where the passport was issued to him. With this clause it is hoped that South American countries and others thinking of inviting refugees will feel more willing to be hospitable, knowing that their invitation is not irrevocable.

Painted for Calvert by Adam Sherriff Scott, R.C.A.

In 1843 James Douglas built the trading post destined to become the City of Victoria, B.C. Builder, too, of the famed Cariboo Trail into the heart of the gold district, Sir James Douglas, "The Father of British Columbia," became its first governor and guided the province through its early years.

CALVERT, Man of Vision of the 17th century, said to his New World settlers, "My resolution is to build . . . I shall encourage all endeavours."

300 years ago Calvert, famous pioneer and Secretary of State to King James I, may well have envisioned Canada's destiny when he said, "The land will yield us many things. It is a good country."

Early champion of unity in the 1600's, Calvert's ideals have been shared by all men of vision since Calvert's time. Let each of us be a man of vision now . . . help develop Canada's destiny.

Jews In Rumania Rely On Jews Here

All the 400,000 Jews left in Rumania are dependent on the Jews of America for the basic essentials of life, Chief Rabbi Alexander Shafran of Rumania reported to the administrative committee of the $170,000,000 campaign of the United Jewish Appeal, in New York.

Rabbi Shafran, a former Rumanian Senator, arrived in the United States to confer with American Jewish leaders about increased relief and rehabilitation for the Jewish survivors in Rumania through the United Jewish Appeal. He will visit several cities on behalf of the appeal.

Declaring that the Jews of Rumania represent the largest Jewish community in any country of Europe, Rabbi Shafran said they must be helped to rebuild their social, economic and religious foundations that were destroyed by the Nazis.

Approximately 200,000 Rumanian Jews, he said, receive basic necessities from the Joint Distribution Committee, one of the three agencies of the United Jewish Appeal, while the rest look to the committee for rehabilitation assistance.

Rabbi Shafran was credited with saving his surviving fellow-Rumanian Jews through pleas for aid to the Queen Mother Helen, the Patriarch of the Church, the Papal Nuncio in Bucharest and the Antonescu regime. He reported that 76,000 returnees from concentration camps and refugees from other countries among Rumania's 400,000 Jews were anxious to settle immediately in Palestine.

It Is The Moment Between Sunset And Sunrise

Here is a brief picture of Joint Distribution Committee work in Italy, among refugees:

1) About 8,000 Jewish refugees live in 10 UNRRA camps, each receiving regular monthly assistance. J.D.C. gives aid for new-born infants, for children, nursing mothers, pregnant women, the aged, the weak, the sick and invalids. In each camp there are one or more kosher kitchens, plus a synagogue, a sexton, a cantor, and often even a "Mohel." For the holidays, Jews received special aid from the J.D.C. over and above the normal amount of relief.

2) Close to 7,000 chalutzim reside in 30 kibbutzim. Villas were transformed into kibbutzim. UNRRA gives each chaluta a monthly subsidy of about $8.00 but all the other necessities are supplied by the Joint, which also remodelled the villas, installed kitchens, showers and baths as well as electrical and water equipment. The religious kibbutzim receive special subventions for kashruth. Parents of newly-born babies receive 6,000 lire. The kibbutzim are only one of the great achievements of the Joint. Anyone who hears the songs of our youth, the music of their labor, will never believe that these are the same ones who had lived under the constant shadow of death.

3) About 600 children have found a haven in four children's homes, two of which are religious homes. The Joint pays for the administrative and teaching personnel, medical supervision, additional food, as well as other expenses. This is as it should be, because we will not stand quietly by, we shall cry out continuously that there is something wrong in the world if our children are hungry and naked.

4) The health of the refugees, which, after years of torture and persecution, is in a critical condition. For this purpose there are three dispensaries, four rest homes for camp inmates and chalutzim, three sanatoria, and the newly-opened tuberculosis sanatorium in Marano.

Besides the previously mentioned four children's homes, schools have been established in every camp in Rome, and in kibbutzim where there are families with small children. During the month of July, a teacher's seminary was financed by the Joint and the UNRRA. Sixty-five students graduated from the seminary, and it is now going to become a permanent teachers institute. The Joint finances a variety of literary and pedagogical publications, supplies us with the Yiddish-American press, and has opened reading rooms equipped with radios in nearly every camp and kibbutz. It has also imported 6,000 Hebrew text books from Palestine, and pays subsidies to about 100 students and artists. A "home for forty students was recently opened in Turin. Every camp and kibbutz is supplied with sports equipment for the physical well-being of the young people.

6) A start has already been made in the teaching of trades, as well as productivization. Large sums have been allocated for tools, machinery and raw materials. About 25 per cent of the people in the kibbutzim have been drawn into productive activities. Articles ranging from baby carriages, tin bath-tubs and tin household utensils to underwear are being manufactured in the factories of the camps.

Our plans for 1947 are:

1) When UNRRA liquidates its program and the new United Nations refugee organization is still inoperative, the J.D.C. must be prepared to undertake the whole task of sustaining the refugees.

2) The camps must be turned into kibbutzim, which have given the refugee the illusion, even if temporary, of a home and a normal life. A camp, with all of its accomplishments, remains a camp, and has become the modern spark of terror in the heart and mind of the refugee. As long as he sits in the camp, long queues will line up before the food cauldrons; human beings will sleep by the hundreds in one room; and one neighbor will literally tread into the heart of the other.

3) The greatest efforts must be expended for productivisation and the teaching of trades. The refugee must not lose his faith in the hope of a new life.

Our slogan for 1947 must be: "No one Jewish boy, no one Jewish girl, no one fully-grown man should be permitted to remain idle."

4) The cultural work must be continued and expanded. There must be established, even if temporarily, high school courses in Yiddish and Hebrew to insure the continued revival of our slaughtered intelligentsia. Even more Yiddish newspapers and books must be published. New legions of teachers must be trained to carry on the cultural and pedagogical work in the camps and in the kibbutzim.

The degradation of the Jews of Europe has reached the turning point. Only great efforts can save those still strong, those still healthy from hopeless despair and demoralization.

It is the moment between sunset and sunrise.

The vitality and hope which has revealed itself amidst wantonness are not the last remnants of strength in the final, desperate struggle before annihilation. It is a new belief in the future of the Jewish people, a new faith in humanity.

This new hope lies in the hands of American Jewry. Should these hands remain closed, then this hope will be stifled. Should these hands be open, materially and morally, then the future will be open.

PALESTINE ASKS FOR DOCTORS AND DENTISTS

The acute need for young physicians and dentists in Palestine was outlined by Dr. Samuel Lewin-Epstein, of the faculty of medicine at Hebrew University, Jerusalem, who is in the United States to study current methods in dental education.

Dr. Epstein, former president of the Palestine Dental Association, conferred with Dr. Elon R. East, associate dean of dental and oral surgery at Columbus University in a series of talks to develop plans for the dental faculty at Hebrew University.

"We must have in Palestine without delay many young practitioners of medicine and dentistry," said Dr. Epstein. "The country now has about 850 dentists and 3,000 physicians," he added. "And since it will be about five years before the new school is in operation, it would be ten years before the younger men could really begin to serve the community. For the service that is the most acute need, we require young men who are qualified physically for the rigors of serving the small, isolated, hard-to-reach towns and settlements back in the hills."

THE COMMUNITY MUST HELP

By Dora Wilensky, of Toronto, Executive Director, Jewish Family And Child Service

Toronto is a city of beautiful homes, and yet there are children in this city who are homeless. The responsibility of providing these children with the warmth and love of family life can no longer remain with a social agency, but now rests with the entire community.

It is emotional maturity more than any other one thing that parents seek to give their children to-day, the security of being loved, of being wanted, of belonging, the kind of security that a child can receive through a loving relationship with his parents, and as a member of a family. Without such a relationship the child is stunted in his growth; without it he is painfully unsure of himself, unable to get along with people and to meet the everyday requirements of life.

For these children who have lost a parent or parents through death, prolonged and serious illness, or separation, the Jewish Family and Child Service seeks to find substitute parents and substitute homes. The most important requirement of a foster home is that the parents shall love and want the child; that they be capable of making him feel that he is really wanted. To a child the lack of mothering and intimate family relationships can be as devastating to his personality as is the lack of food to his body.

A foster child also provides a rich experience for your own child, who learns to share its parents and home with a child who has not one of its own. The Jewish Family and Child Service pays for the care of the child and helps the foster parents with the questions which arise in every home where the desire is to raise children so that they will be healthy and happy.

Until February 15 the Jewish Family And Child Service is seeking foster homes in Toronto.

Brotherhood In The Atomic Age

By Joshua Loth Liebman, Rabbi Of Temple Israel, Boston, Mass., And Author Of "Peace Of Mind"

Gradually we are coming to understand what a man-created fire modern Prometheus has stolen from the gods. Like fire, atomic energy can destroy man's dwelling place or give warmth, light and cheer . . . the blessing or the curse, life or death. Our whole earth stands now as did Israel at Mount Sinai where, according to the great rabbinic legend, God lifted the mountain by its roots and said in effect, "Even against your will accept these moral commandments of life or I shall bury you beneath this mass of matter."

In such an age of decision as ours, brotherhood dares tolerate no exceptions. An exception in brotherhood is like the veto power applied to the control of atomic weapons, the negation of life and hope. If we in America act on the assumption that "we believe in freedom and justice for all except the Negroes or the Jews. . . ." or some other group-object of our prejudice, then that little word "except" is the tragic veto undermining the foundations both of brotherhood and of religion. For the principle of unanimity in the application of love and justice to men and women of every race and creed is the "sine qua non" of human survival in the Atomic Age.

Of course there are enemies, visible and invisible, of this principle of brotherhood at work in America. The hooded forces of bigotry ride today along many highways of frustration and bitterness. The Ku Klux Klan is but one symbol among many of organized intolerance now disfiguring our national landscape. More dangerous than these present hatemongers is the invisible threat of future economic depression. We must never permit our good American earth to be transformed into a wasteland of social and industrial misery. For it is in the man-made swamps of hunger and joblessness and psychic insecurity that hate breeds and "scapegoatism" grows.

Where hate rules a nation, no man, however powerful, no religion, however noble, no class, however strong, is truly safe. Borrowing an allegory from our Bible, the story of the sacrifice of Isaac, we can say that all of us are in the position of Abraham today, called upon to offer some of our highly treasured ideas and possessions upon the altar of survival, our economic selfishness, our social injustice, our religious prejudices and racial bigotries, all of which may have seemed tolerable in the pre-atomic era but which now threaten to become the detonators of the earth's last bombs.

Let us not forget that there are streaks of light as well as dark shadows upon the American canvas. What is often overlooked is that America is the only country in human experience that from its birth was consecrated to equality, brotherhood, democracy. Dynamic psychology has now proved that the experiences of a child may be deeply buried for decades in the subconscious and then explode with devastating fury; that the abnormalcies of childhood may reveal themselves only in the distortions of maturity.

Applying this insight by analogy to the American nation we can say that this country alone of the Western world has had a normal childhood and therefore has the infinite capacity to resist abnormalcy in maturity. All of Europe for example, has had virulent anti-Semitism somewhere in its youth as a collective pattern of action. There is no major European that has not expelled, persecuted and pogromized Jews.

Europe in this sense has had an evil childhood with dark brutal memories and distorted perspectives; its sadism under Hitler was truly "a reminiscence of things past." America from the time of its founding under Washington, Adams, Jefferson has had a psychically healthy spiritually tolerant pattern to follow. These intangibles of national psychology must not be discounted. It is true that we Americans have had our aberrations, our violent prejudices and racial discriminations, but the whole trend of government from the very beginning has been to eliminate them, not to glorify them.

This new nation began its career on earth with an unparalleled idealism. It has not had to repress or disavow centuries of brutal history. Its earth here, as it were, has been relatively fresh and sweet-smelling from the very beginning and has not had to be perfumed in order to conceal the stench and the odor of the blood of generations of martyrs. It is this difference between European and American history which offers genuine hope for our leadership in human brotherhood.

It is not only the wonderful normalcy of America in its childhood which is a source of hope for mankind's future; it is also America's pioneering work in atomic research which, paradoxically enough, opens up a different vista as far as Brotherhood is concerned. A new factor has entered the field of human relations. The world is going to have to be better than it has ever been or there will be no world. What the Jew felt in the presence of the deaf and unfeeling Nazis, all humanity will feel under the threat of the deaf and unfeeling bomb.

The atomic age can spell doom for the millionaire and the commissar, the educated and the uneducated, the young and the old alike. There is a good chance that under this sword of Damocles, this possibility of universal doom, mankind will learn before it is too late that the differences between men are far less than the unities among them.

There is a real possibility that just as the Jewish people through the ages achieved mutual solicitude under the threat of external danger, so now the peoples of the world will achieve a new social solidarity and compassionate togetherness under the threat of nature's awesome power. The problem of racial and religious hatreds may very well be swallowed up in the larger problem of human survival.

From now on nobody will be safe from anybody else and that very universality of danger can create a brotherhood of danger in which inevitable differences will be accepted as unimportant compared with the desperate unity of the human family. In this age of simplification, people must control their aggressions and hostilities against minority groups or the whole world will go up in smoke. The persecution of one group will be the trigger pulling the gun of atomic warfare.

If that day should come, Catholics, Protestants, Jews, blacks, whites, yellows and reds will suffer the same radiation burns and die in the same dust. The menace of this atomic age can yet become the birthplace of that mutual sympathy for all men which will make the earth safe at last for minorities and majorities alike. "Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness."

Brotherhood Week reminded us all that our generation has the chance to make the earth God's dwelling place. It need not become graveyard of hopes. We can make it the graveyard of fulfillment. We need not, like Samson, tear down the pillars of life in a blind atomic rage. Our generation can become, like Moses greeting God face to face, mature, free, loving, answering the threat of evil "unconditional destruction" with life's greater affirmation "unconditional survival."

Zionist Aftermath: Can The New Executive Establish Authority?

By Robert Weltsch, In The London Jewish Chronicle

The Zionist Movement has been left in a state of indescribable confusion, as the aftermath of the Basle Congress. At a crucial moment, when there was nothing more essential than the re-establishment of firm authority and the laying down of a clear political course, the Congress not only failed to elect a President, or even an Executive, but it also accepted a resolution which within a few days of its promulgation was being interpreted by many as meaning the very opposite of what it was believed to stand for during the "Battle of Congress" itself. In the Congress the resolution was the battle-cry of those who opposed Zionist participation in the Palestine Conference. Its acceptance by a strangely composed majority of right and left wing extremists spelt defeat for the Weizmann line of policy, and therefore the candidature of Dr. Weizmann for the Presidency was simply ruled out. But now we are told by official spokesmen of the Jewish Agency that a "majority of the new Executive favours participation in the Palestine Conference," and this information is also widely publicised in the British press. It is no wonder, therefore, that the Zionist public is bewildered. Simultaneously, we are faced with a steady expansion of the terrorist movement in Palestine, and it must be seriously questioned whether the Jewish Agency is still in a position to exercise real authority there, or whether the reins of government have not slipped from its hands into those of the terrorist gang-leaders.

The present deplorable situation is, however, the logical outcome of the official policy of the Jewish Agency during the last six years, although some members of the Executive may not be aware of it. Since 1940, at least, the theory of "activism" has been preached and taught in all sections of the various youth organisations in Palestine, and it has achieved unchallengeable sway over the souls of idealistic youngsters, eager to show their devotion to the national cause right to the point of personal danger and the sacrifice of their own lives. This process of education cannot be reversed. What the responsible leaders did not foresee was the fact that "activism" has its own inner logic and that one cannot expect young people educated in this spirit to draw a line between two different kinds of violence, one officially condemned by the Jewish institutions, and one recommended.

Simultaneously, anti-British agitation in certain quarters went on unchecked even at the time of Dunkirk and El Alamein. It was not confined to criticism of the White Paper of 1939—which would have been understandable and justified—but increased out of all proportion until it cast suspicion on all British actions and motives, and even went to the extent of comparing the British with Hitler and the Nazis in their attitude to the Jews. The few people who recognised the injustice and danger involved in this sort of poisonous agitation were quite helpless because the official newspapers themselves had no influence at all on the minds of these youths, who were guided by their own "underground" press and illegal pamphlets, such as, for instance, "Ashnav," which had been rumoured to have the unofficial approval of the Jewish Agency's Political Department.

While the idea of self-defence against external attacks, such as occurred in 1929 and 1936-39, was accepted by all Jews in Palestine, the gradual transformation of the self-defence movement into a force of virtual revolt was not. It is not surprising that the terrorist activities, conducted with daring and with a professional skill which wrung some sort of compliment from even the British press, attracted many of those who did not originally stand inside the terrorist camp. Thus the flow of members of Palmach and Haganah into the Irgun and Stern Gang can easily be explained. The most serious question for the new Zionist Executive, therefore, is whether they can re-establish their authority as political leaders, or whether they have virtually to abdicate in favour of the "activist" leaders who have succeeded in outdoing them in "activism."

This is the more to be doubted because the Congress again chose to proclaim a political programme that clearly cannot be attained. Although warned by Dr. Weizmann, Dr. Goldmann, Dr. Stephen Wise, and others, that international recognition of a Jewish State in the whole of Palestine (where Jews constitute a minority) is out of the question, the Congress, out of sheer stubbornness, reiterated the so called Biltmore Programme as the aim of practical Zionist policy. With this rallying cry and with a programme of "moderate activism" (as suggested by the majority of the Palestinian Labour Party), it is difficult to see how the militant organisations can be convinced that a compromise such as partition should be accepted as a good solution.

The view expressed by a great section of the British press that the Congress decision is largely an "American" victory requires some correction. As was pointed out in a letter by Israel Cohen in The Times, only a minority of the American delegates voted in favour of the policy of non-participation (rightly or wrongly interpreted as meaning a policy of non-cooperation with the British Government). But this arithmetic is just a minor point. More important is the fact that the attitude adopted by the leaders of the Zionist Organisation of America did not originate in America. It was not Dr. Silver, but Mr. Ben-Gurion who was the inventor of the Biltmore Programme. It was not Americans but emissaries from Palestine who advised American Jewry—too successfully, indeed—that the moment had come for the proclamation of a Jewish State in the whole of Palestine and that various forms of "resistance" were the necessary means to achieve it.

It must have been difficult for an outsider to discern the difference between the doctrine of the official Zionist leadership and the more daring—and, for many, more inspiring—follies of Peter Bergson, a nephew of the late Palestinian Chief Rabbi Kook. True, it may be said that the Zionist leaders in the Golah (and not only in America) failed in their duty of independent thinking; they took no pains to examine the realities and to employ those moral and political standards with which they had been better inculcated than the Palestinians. But the Jewish Agency, led by Mr. Ben-Gurion, flooded the Golah with hundreds of "shlichim", officers and N.C.O.s of the propaganda machine, and succeeded in achieving an almost complete "Gleichschaltung." Dr. Silver, though his remark may not have been quite innocent, was wholly right in asking what had changed since the summer of 1945 and why the Zionist Movement, solemnly sworn to the Biltmore Programme only a year before on the insistence of the Executive, was now summoned to agree to a compromise formula of Partition. Not only "activism", but "Biltmore" also has turned out to be a Frankenstein monster which the Zionist leadership will find it hard to control.

At the Basle Congress the Zionist Executive reaped the harvest of the seed they had sown. It will be interesting to watch how they extricate themselves from this position. From the parliamentary point of view, it is, of course, sufficiently inconsistent that the same people who suffered defeat at the Congress were later re-elected by the Inner Zionist Council (with the notable exception of Dr. Weizmann). But if they really try to conduct their policy in defiance of the Congress resolution (which obviously they may be forced to do), the very important question of Zionist morale will again have to be put on the agenda. Even a favourable decision by the British Government, for which we must hope, will not clear up this point.

the organization which financed his trip.

Rabbi Baruch Korff said Mr. Baldwin's report compromised basic and inalienable rights of Jews in and out of Palestine. He specifically criticized the recommendation for severance of Trans-Jordan, and he accused Mr. Baldwin of soft-pedalling British crimes in the Holy Land.

"Palestine under the Mandate (Britain's Mandate from the League of Nations) includes Trans-Jordan," Rabbi Korff said, "and the severance of Trans-Jordan, two-thirds of Palestine, by the British is a flagrant violation of the mandate."

As an official observer for President Truman, Mr. Baldwin traveled first to England and then to Palestine to confer with leading figures in the conflict which hovers over Palestine. He met with Prime Minister Attlee and other members of the British government, with British military leaders in Palestine, with prominent Arabs and Jews, including Menahem Beigen, leader of the underground group, Irgun Zvai Leumi.

His report mirrors the conflicting attitudes of the various groups, and with each he finds some cause for sympathy. He admits that his formula for an independent Palestine will cause temporary trouble, and he emphasizes that the ultimate success will depend on Anglo-American agreement.

The Baldwin plan, as submitted to President Truman, has these salient features:

1. The boundaries of Palestine should be confined, at least temporarily, to existing boundaries. Trans-Jordan under King Abdullah, would thus become a separate state of the Arab League, recognised by the United States and eligible for inclusion in the United Nations.

2. Palestine, as an independent democracy, should be included in the United Nations.

3. A United Nations Commission should be requested to arrange for, and supervise, the calling of a constitutional convention for election of a Palestinian government. Homeless Jews in Europe would be included in Palestine elections.

4. The British mandate should be terminated when the elected government assumes office.

5. A United Nations Palestine Land Commission should supervise for five years land transfers and sales between Arabs and Jews. It should also insure the return of Britain's "immense land holdings" to the elected government.

6. A $300,000,000 loan from the United States through its Export-Import Bank, to Middle East states is recommended. The funds would be used for industrial development, particularly in the use of the River Jordan for power and irrigation purposes.

7. A. U. N. police force should replace British troops until the Palestine government has trained and equipped a local army, or until it agrees with the U.N. that such a force is no longer necessary.

In his conversations with Mr. Attlee, the American representative said he found a genuine desire to fulfill the Balfour declaration providing a Jewish homeland. But the paramount obstacle in British eyes, Mr. Baldwin reported, was the threat of an Arab uprising.

He rejects this theory, holding that Arabs and Jews have demonstrated they can live together when freed from political motivations. He further rejects the plan for partition advanced by the British.

With other British theories, Mr. Baldwin also takes issue. He says the Jewish underground is not a minority group of extremists, opposed by the population.

"It should not be inferred . . . that all Palestinians are actually members of one or the other of these 'resistance' groups, but it is a fact that the mass of the population support these underground activities in their various categories," the report states.

Mr. Baldwin discusses the activities of the three underground groups—Haganah, Irgun Zvai Leumi and the Stern Group—and warns that failure to achieve statehood by this spring might result in their amalgamation for "less overt military action."

The report says every Jewish group, including the British-founded Jewish Agency of Palestine, is actively encouraging illegal immigration. Mr. Baldwin also tells of a rumored $38,000,000 fund which supports this immigration. In this connection, he estimates the Jewish population of Palestine has jumped from 600,000 to nearly 1,000,000.

Mr. Baldwin is particularly critical of the British view that Palestine cannot support a population increase. He estimates that Tel Aviv alone could provide for 200,000 new residents.

". . . at least five or six hundred thousand of them could immediately be absorbed by Palestine without any fundamental economic disruption," he reports.

He does not join in the British belief that Russia might step in if Britain pulled out. The whole history of the Arabs and Jews, the report contends shows them fundamentally opposed to a Communistic society.

Mr. Baldwin envisions great industrial opportunities in Palestine, and he says they have not been exploited only because of British hindrances.

"It is (my) sincere opinion . . . that lucrative industrial expansion employing hundreds of thousands of people would result overnight were any modicum of economic freedom given to the local industrialists."

He sympathizes with the British soldiers, but insists that troops must be maintained in the Middle East for security reasons until a substitute formula has been evolved, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

The sending of a special Congressional mission to Palestine to foster the establishment of a democratic commonwealth there was advocated by Representative Jacob K. Javits of New York, in Washington.

Mr. Javits said that "the situation of the Jews in Europe and Palestine will grow worse on all counts the longer a solution is deferred."

Reporting to the House on a trip to Palestine and Greece, he said that a resolution approved last year, calling for the United States "to use its good offices" to aid the entry of Jews into Palestine, would be reinforced by sending a special mission.

The mission, "to aid the British in supervising increased immigration and land settlement and the resumption of land purchase by Jews" would immediately "ease the political pressure considerably," he said.
